New Beginnings

To Serve and Protect

The Police Foundations diploma program provides pre-employment training including diversity, career preparation, human relations, police powers, lifestyle management, and investigations. Offered in partnership with Confederation College, training includes a background in a wide range of police-related topics such as community policing, sociology, criminology, security services, mental health and substance use issues, and the Canadian justice system. The Oshki-Wenjack program provides learning from an Indigenous perspective with an emphasis on topics that affect individuals living in northern First Nations. Plus, you'll get firsthand learning from a Nishnawbe-Aski Police Service (NAPS) mentoring officer.
